The walls of Frandsen Humanities have been given a new look — a mural created by Maria Jaramillo who came to UNR from Chile in 1972.

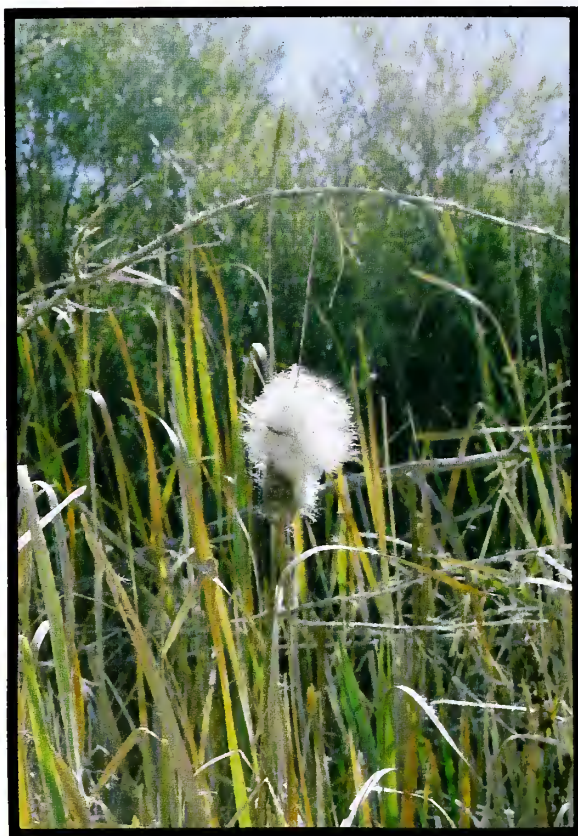

For some, the mural may represent nothing more than artwork, but for Mrs. Jaramillo, symbolism permeates her creation. Painted predominantly in cool colors, her mural depicts the coldness and uncertainty of the atomic age.

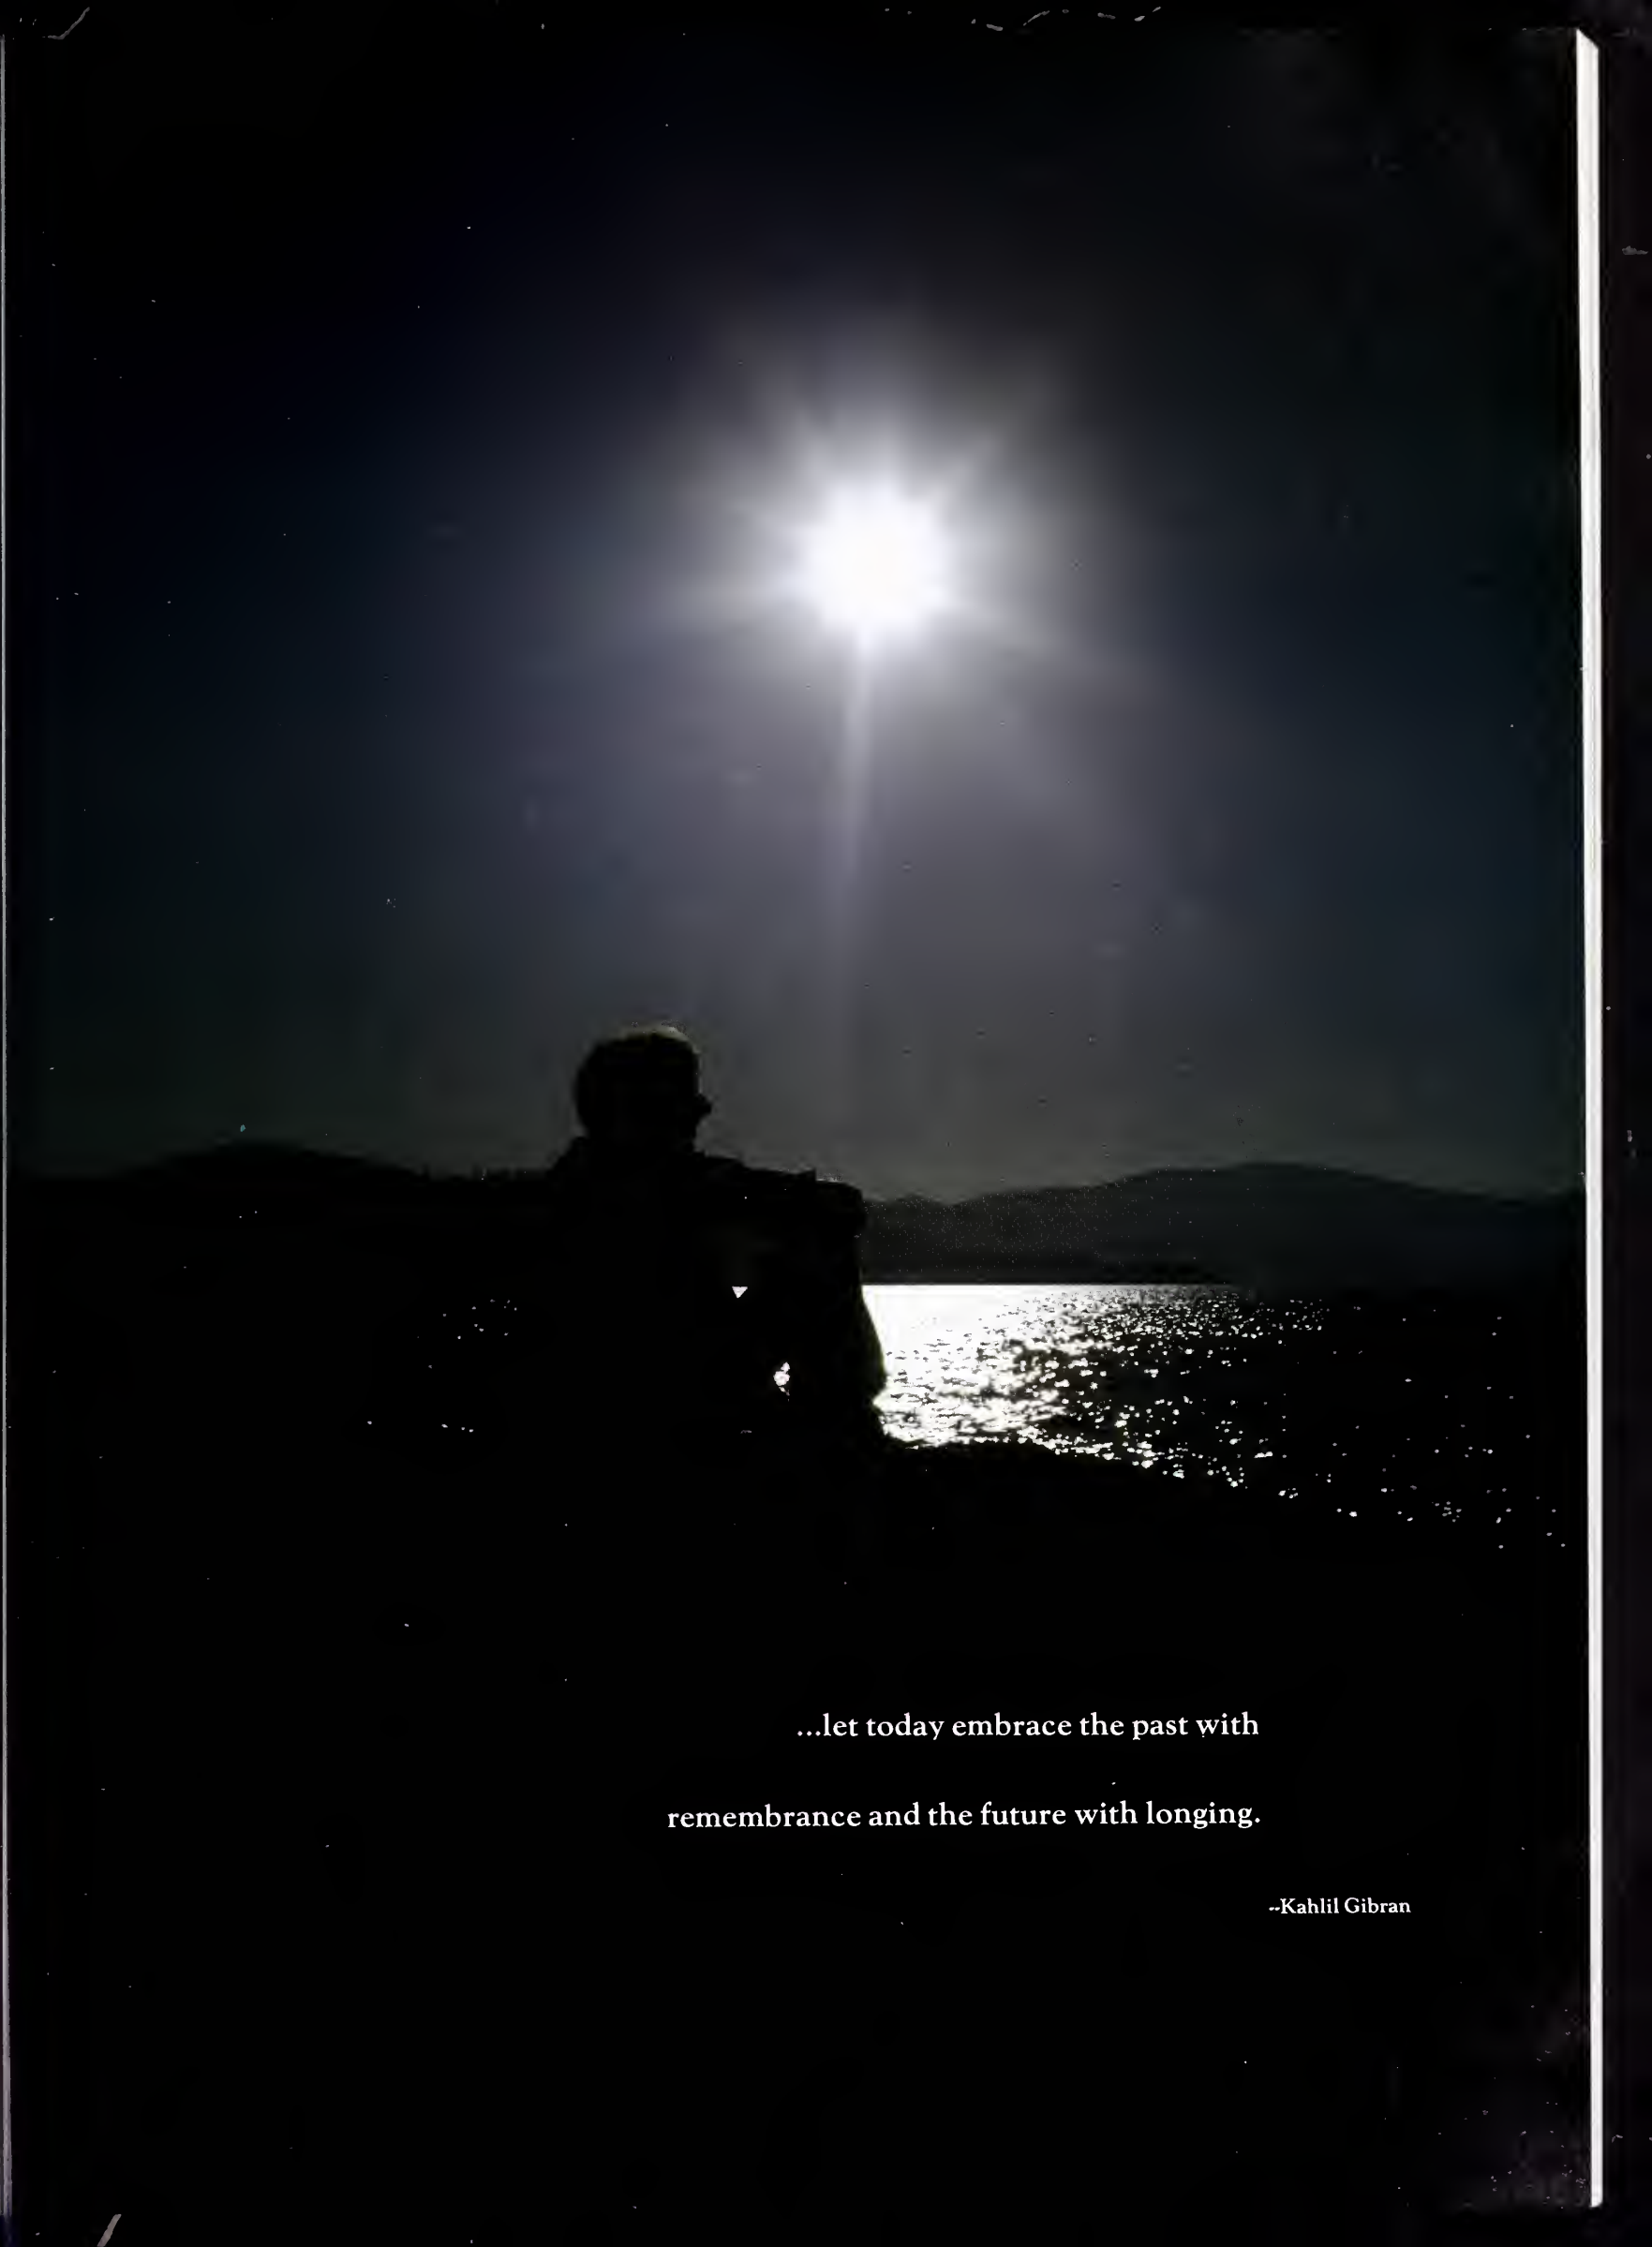

On the left, an infant rises from a machine to the nucleus of an atom. The second part of the mural spans a time period of 200 years in the history of North American women. For Mrs. Jaramillo, the group illustrate unrest and sadness. Her brush strokes lead the eye to a bomb shelter where part of a woman's hand melts on contact. This phase of the mural represents our current era and a poor transition into the atomic age.

Diagonal lines in the third phase focus on a central figure that symbolizes the unity of women of all races. This single body advances toward a future of peace.

Mrs. Jaramillo explains her final drawing saying, "I haven't wanted to paint anything pleasing to the eye, but it is a call for awareness to young people about the future of atomization."

...let today embrace the past with remembrance and the future with longing.

FEE S
PER CREDIT

As the cost of a college education continues to escalate, students encounter more difficulties when trying to meet tuition demands. This year UNR students were faced with a substantial tuition hike from $22 per unit to $23, with the additional $1 per unit going to ASUN. Opposition to the increase was expressed by those who felt the decision was unfair.

By a vote of 10-5-1, the ASUN Senate approved the fee increase during the summer while six senators were absent. And, few students were aware of the meeting.

But, the ASUN budget was in trouble as it faced an operating deficit of $90,000. In an effort to further reduce costs, cuts were made in Activities, Finance and Control, and Publications.

According to ASUN President Greg Neuweiler, the increase marks the first raise of ASUN fees since the 1950s.

CHANGES

Ren Rice

The changes, they just keep happening. It's late Fall now, a pause just before the cold plunge into winter. The building next door is gone, torn down earlier this semester. A gaping hole, like a missing tooth, is left in the quad.

The student union was expanded, the football stadium grew to twice its capacity, and Morrill Hall received a new lease on life complete with facelift.

The football team made history this year. The song girls became cheerleaders, the medical school has it's first four year class enrolled, and another of the "hodgepodge of crumbling old buildings" in the quad will be torn down in the Spring.

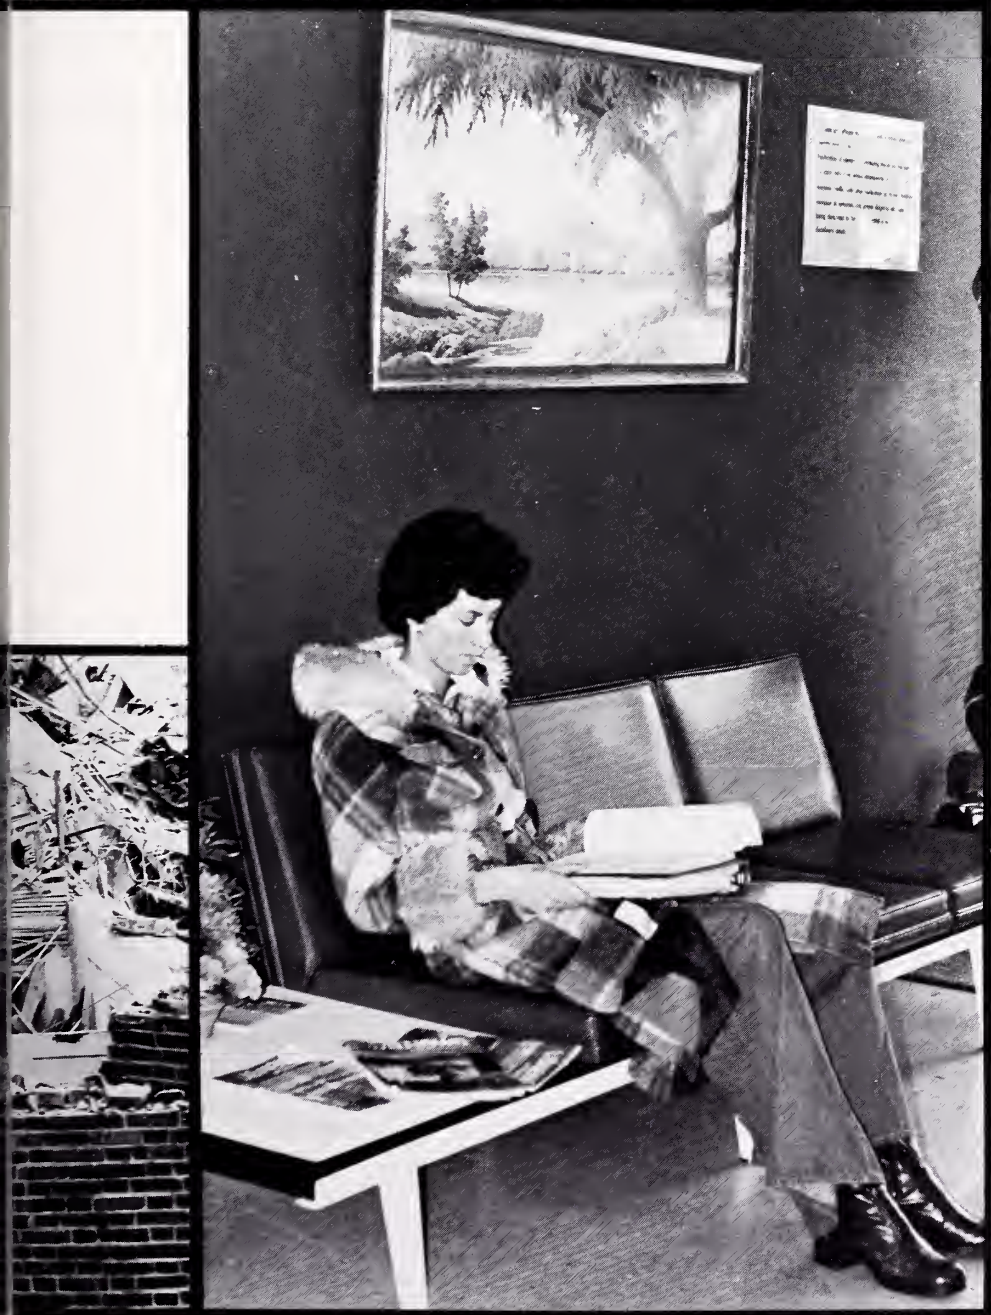

By the time you read this twice the football team will probably have won another championship. By the fifth reading most of the song girls will be mothers and your doctor may have graduated from the UNR Medical School. If after fifty years you drag this time-worn old book out once more, the quad's "hodgepodge" will probably be gone.

The changes. They season us, like the changing seasons season the passing days. Weathering each year here, the memory of UNR will be carried within us when we leave.

In a half-century, when the time comes to dust off these old memories, let them be good ones. Remember cold days and hot wine. A number one football team and good friends to celebrate it with. And if you're very lucky, remember what you loved here, because that won't change, ever.

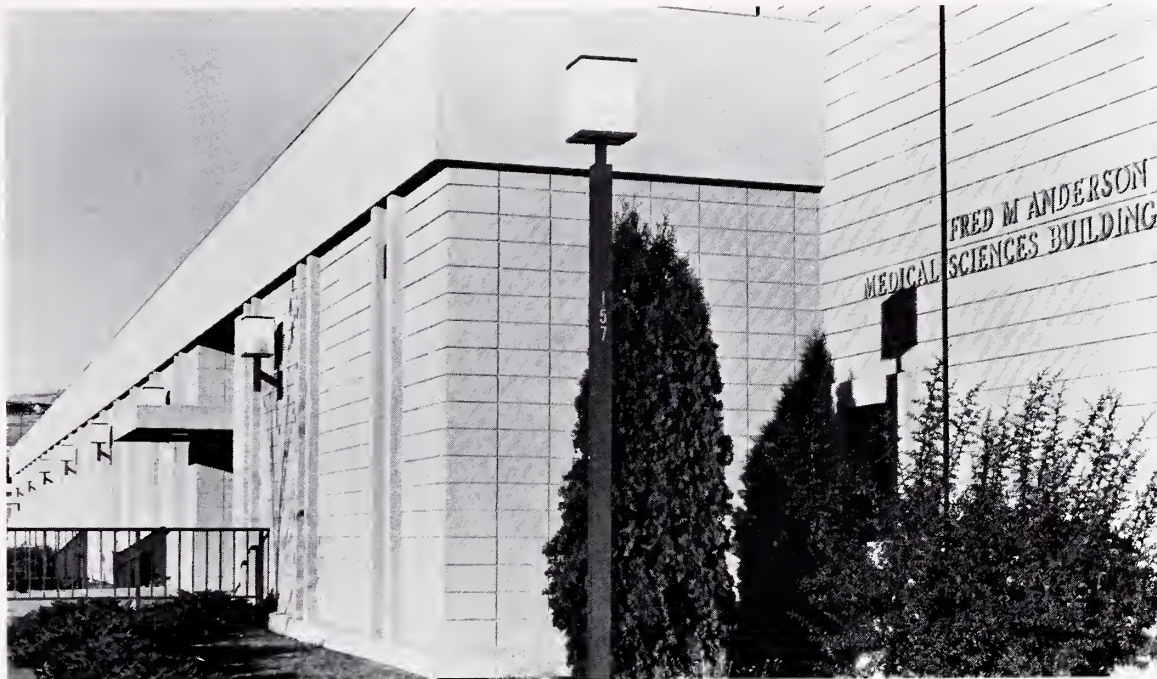

Although the UNR campus is experiencing several changes this year, at least one thing has been preserved — Morrill Hall. As one of the oldest campus buildings, it received $622,000 for renovation to comply with earthquake safety codes.

In 1894, Morrill Hall, stood among the first five buildings on campus and was used for virtually everything.

The rejuvenated Morrill Hall will be used for offices of various alumni.

Morrill Hall was named for Senator Justin S. Morrill of Vermont, author of the Morrill Land Grant Act of 1862, which established the system of land grant colleges.

Morrill Hall, 1908.

Behind the Scenes

You know that thing that sits on top of Lincoln Hall and looks like a weather vane? It's not. Actually, it's a listening device set up in the late 60s and early 70s to monitor student activists at UNR.

Every once in a while, it listens to our private conversations, even though it's rusty and somewhat inactivated.

These are excerpts from a tape made last semester at White Pine Hall:

"Up for a little cosmic encounter anyone?"

"I hear there's a kegger in Evans Park tomorrow..."

"Mark, would you get your goddamn socks off my bed!!...Hey, wanna beer?"

"No, really you guys, I've got to study..."

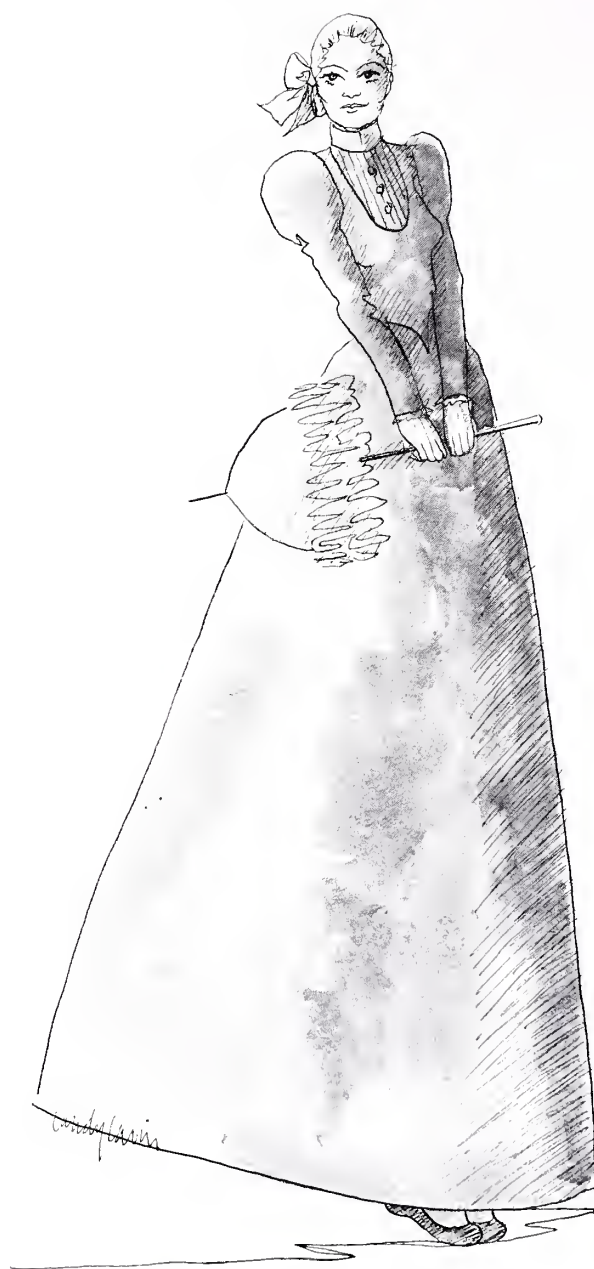

"Carolyn, would you please tell those jerks in 305 to turn down their stereo — don't they ever study?"

"...thanks for coming. Floor reps don't forget the pancake breakfast...What time?...8:30! Shit..."

Phi Delta Theta

In its seventh year, Nevada's Alpha Chapter of Phi Delta Theta planned several projects.

Phi Deltas restored their old house on University Terrace and raised funds for the new one located across the street.

The group also planned to help restore one of Virginia City's oldest churches.

More than a year ago, rumors circulated that an independent fraternity was forming on the UNR campus. Most people ignored the rumors, and nearly all who believed them said it would be impossible to form a new local fraternity. Yet, at the beginning of this year, the public noticed a group of men wearing strange, new letters on their shirts. A local fraternity had been established with only 15 men.

Omega Xi is the only campus fraternity without national affiliation, and within one year its membership has grown to more than forty. In the short time they have existed, the members have built a strong organization. The men of Omega Xi take great pride in what they have accomplished, and they are here to stay.

COMPETITION

Oct. 22, 1978 was a day for fun, activity, and fatigue for the 17 couples who chose to enter the housing-sponsored endurance event.

Between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m., the couples were required to compete in the following events:

1. The 50 meter swim or the 400 yard dash.
2. Six games of ping pong or six games of racquetball.
3. Golf or frisbee (testing accuracy).
4. The 3-legged race or the wheelbarrow race.
5. The obstacle course (pictured).

The outstanding couple captured the grand prize: a $25 dinner at Mi Casa's. Individual winners were awarded T-shirts.

THE TOGA PARTY

Toga: (toga) (L., to cover: see thatch)

1. in Ancient Rome, a loose one piece garment worn in public by citizens.
2. a robe of office; characteristic gown of a profession.
3. sheet worn by university students to wild and crazy toga parties.

It all started as promotion for National Lampoon's "Animal House," a movie spoof focusing on the bizarre antics of a roudy college fraternity. But, that's not where it stopped.

Inspired by the idea of donning a toga and throwing a wild party, college students across the nation transformed Lampoon's party into a campus fad.

Even UNR joined in, as these independents well demonstrate.

THE RACES

A Nevada Tradition

Our Deans.

David A. Hansen,
Assistant Dean of Students.

Dean Hansen is fairly new to UNR, joining up in September, 1978. He is responsible for the coordination of student services publications, non-traditional programming and the new student orientation program. He is the advisor to the Panhellenic Council and the Interfraternity Council and to the Associated Women Students. Dean Hansen is also responsible for exit interviews and general student counseling.

Roberta Barnes,
Dean of Students.

Dean Barnes has been with UNR since 1959. She has held the positions of Women's Counselor and Instructor, Assistant Dean of Women, Dean of Women and Acting Dean of Students. In 1971, Dean Barnes was promoted to her current position, Dean of Students.

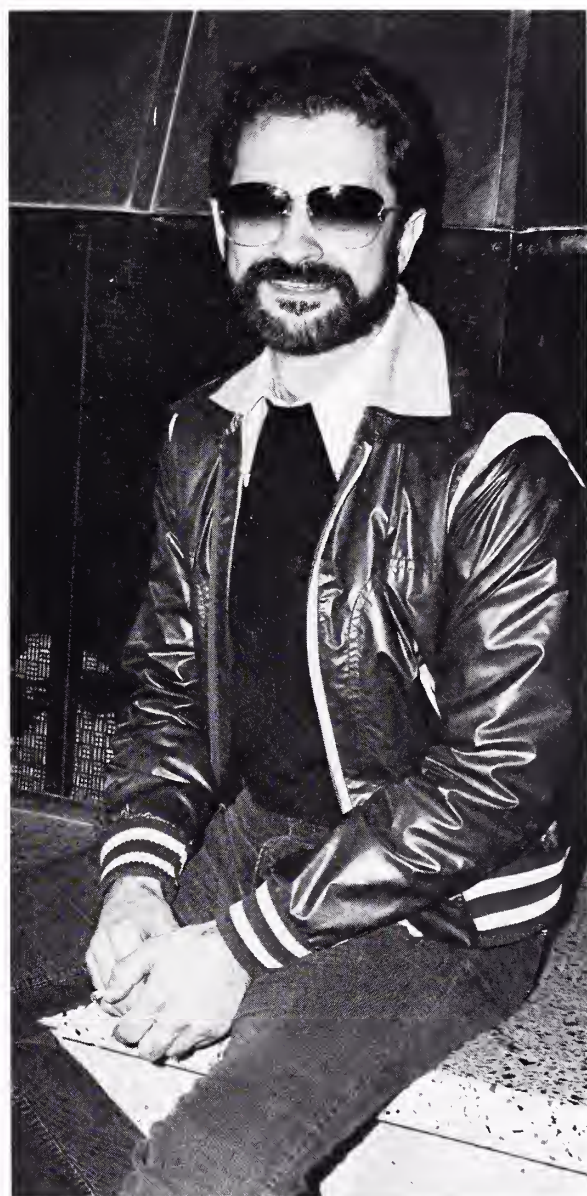

In this capacity she is responsible for the administration and coordination of the Student Services Program, which includes the Student Health Service, Counseling and Testing, foreign student advisement, Student Union, student activities and organizations, orientation, Special Programs for the Disadvantaged, financial aid, career planning and placement, veterans' services, alcohol education program and University residence halls and married student housing. (And we think we're busy!)

Robert G. Kinney, Associate Dean of Students.

Dean Kinney came to UNR in 1970. He is responsible for student discipline, student information files, exit interviews, National Student Exchange Program, Student Sponsors, and Who's Who Among Students. He also advises the UNR Rally Squad and Alpha Phi Omega and directs two assistant deans. Dean Kinney is particularly adept at cutting red tape.

Pete Perriera,
Assistant Dean of Students.

Dean Perriera came to UNR in 1968. He directs Jot Travis Union and its services — meeting rooms, scheduling, check cashing, ticket sales, foreign travel, games, guest rooms and other Union services. The 'new look' in the Student Union can be attributed to a lot of effort on the part of Dean Perriera.

Dean Perriera also advises Asun activities, and assists in programming student activities.

Pack Ends Season 11-0

WOLFPACK IS NO. 1

by Chris Healy

At the start of the 1978 season, Head Coach Chris Ault speculated that solid performances from the defense and a strong field goal kicker would enable the Pack to enter the playoffs for the new NCAA Division 1-AA championship.

UNR opened in September with Stephen F. Austin on an overcast Saturday afternoon, and things seemed to fall into place quickly. The defense "won it for us today and they'll do it all season" said Ault. Led by defensive lineman James Curry, the defense shutout the Lumberjacks 32-0.

After the game, Ault commented on the kicking performance saying, "Something has to be done about our placekicking. It's driving me up a wall. Two different kickers couldn't..." and the "Little General" was ready to use Sagebrush classifieds to find a new kicker.

Arch-rival Las Vegas was next on the Pack's list and again, Ault called on the defense to do the job. Led by quarterback Larry Worman, the Pack jumped to an early two touchdown lead. The defense kept the pressure on, and UNR coasted to what looked like an easy win until lightning struck. Two UNR turnovers set up the Rebels for two quick touchdowns, and suddenly, a 20-0 lead was cut to a mere six points.

Again the placekicker was the scapegoat, since Fernando Serrano missed a first half extra point. The Pack offense took over and demonstrated to a crowd of 21,000 (the largest ever to attend a Nevada football game), the correct usage of their new ball-control offense.

Reno drove over 50 yards to the Rebel 20 when the drive stalled on fourth down.

Ault called on Serrano to try a 37-yard field goal despite pleas of opposition from top assistant Bill Daniel. Somehow the kick went through, and all the ingredients were now in the Nevada stew for a successful season. Final score: UNR 23, UNLV 14.

"The addition of Serrano's kicking game made us into a contending team. It was an amazing turnaround," said Ault.

The third game of the season held the spirit of revenge as the Pack faced 1977's nemesis, UC Davis. The previous year, the Aggies handed an embarrassing 37-21 loss to an overconfident Wolf Pack.

When the Pack took the field that day, it was apparent they were ready. No overconfidence this time. Fernando Serrano continued the streak he had started the previous week and again was the hero with two field goals in a 12-7 victory. Serrano went on to lead the nation in kick scoring.

During the first three games of the season, UNR fans noticed that the defense they had looked for during the first two years of Ault's reign had finally arrived, and the offense that passed at every opportunity was gone.

The Pack had gone to the ball-control offense because they had the equipment to do it. Sophomore fullback Frank Hawkins ran well behind a tough offensive line led by tackle David Hahn. The "Hawk" was on his way to setting a single season rushing record with 1,445 yards on 259 carries, nearly six yards a carry. He also led the team in scoring with 17 TDs.

The Wolves' record climbed to 4-0 when Hawkins had the greatest day any UNR runner has ever had in a 37-14 romp over San Francisco State. Hawkins' 293 yards established him as a definite All-American candidate, a record he achieved as the only sophomore named.

The Pack romped through the rest of their schedule and became the number one team in their division after a 39-15 victory over Sacramento State. The first UNR football team to ever rank Number One was trying to become the first to ever go undefeated.

A 37-0 victory over Idaho State in the final regular season game gave the Pack their undefeated wish. That victory proved extremely costly, as Larry Worman hurt his knee in the third quarter of the game.

The first UNR football appearance in post-season competition since 1948 was scheduled for Saturday, Dec. 9, at Mackay Stadium. The big question for UNR...Will Worman play?

The Pack faced the University of Massachusetts Minutemen, a team that had an 8-3 record compared to UNR's 11-0.

But, it was obvious that the Minutemen had played a tougher schedule than Reno.

The two teams exchanged touchdowns in the first quarter for a 7-7 tie. Larry Worman was at quarterback and things seemed to be going well.

But, that rumor was quickly dispelled. Massachusetts scatbat Denny Dent returned the Nevada kickoff 96 yards for a touchdown, and the romp was on.

The UNR partisans, at first glad to see Worman at quarterback, soon turned on him yelling for freshman Kevin Wheeler. That didn't work either, as Massachusetts rolled to a 44-7 lead in the fourth quarter.

A small comeback made the score easier to swallow, but the Wolves and their coach realized they had been mauled by U of Mass. 44-21.

Ault thinks his team still has a positive attitude despite the loss. "We did something that no one else before us at UNR had done. We went undefeated and got the community involved with our program. It was an extremely successful season."

The year was a good one for Ault. He was offered the head coaching job at Wichita State, and was wooed by San Jose State, but turned both of them down. UNR will have Ault for at least one more year, and he looks forward to the challenge of playing in the tough Big Sky Conference in 1979.

With the Wolves losing only 12 of their Pack to graduation, 1979 could be as good a year as '78.

The Fremont Cannon

The cannon is an exact replica of the 12-pound mountain howitzer used by Captain John C. Fremont on his 1844 expedition across Nevada. The original cannon was one of only 13 made by the C. Alger & Company, South Boston Iron Works at the request of the U.S. Department of War.

The cannon was constructed by the Kennecott Copper Corporation, Nevada Mines Division in 1969. The trophy cannon is claimed by the winner of the Nevada-Reno vs. Nevada-Las Vegas football game and is valued at over $10,000 — making it one of the most expensive of college football's rivalry symbols in the nation.

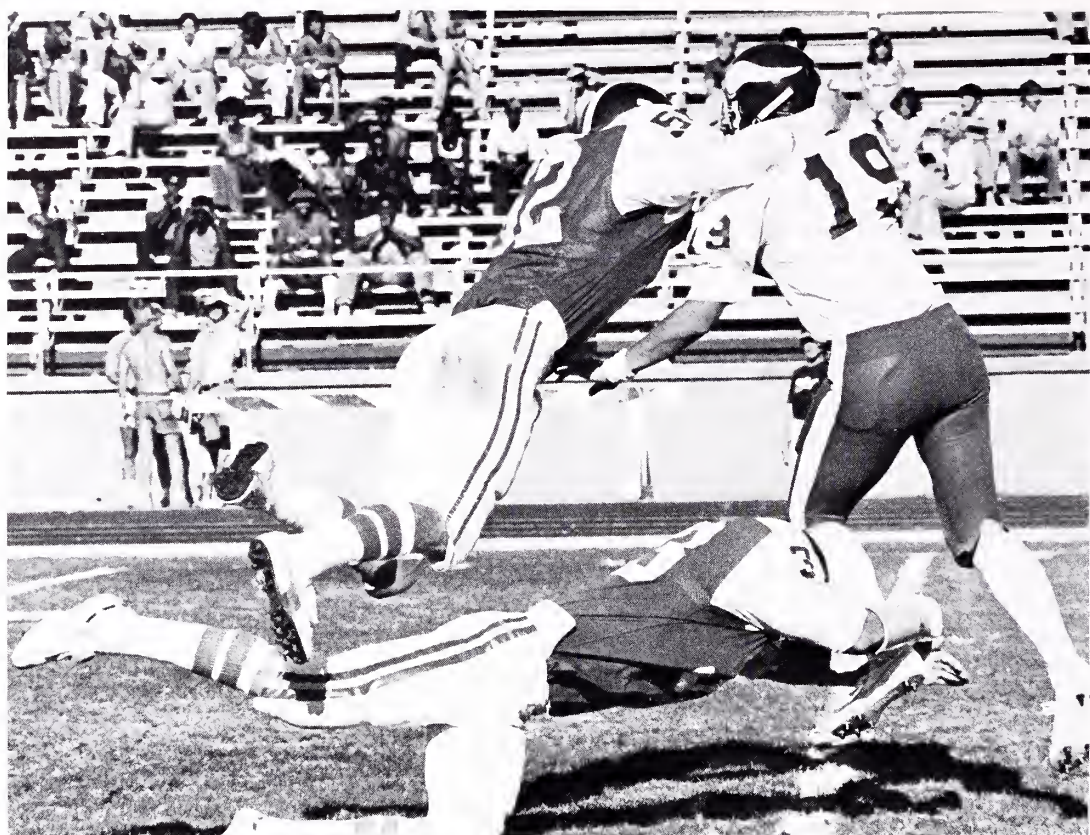

The University of Nevada-Reno Wolf Pack football team won the cannon in 1978 with a 23-14 triumph over the Rebels from the University of Nevada-Las Vegas.

UNR's Winning Swim Team

Under the superb supervision of Head Coach Jerry Ballew, the UNR Women's Swimming and Diving Team have "come a long way, baby."

Last year the team rose from obscurity to national prominence with a 9-1 regular season mark and a 20th place finish in the 1978 A.I.A.W. Small College Championships in Gainesville, GA. The 1978 season was their best showing ever.

At this writing, the team holds an 11-0 record and may well go undefeated. The Wolf Pack Swimmers will host the 1979 A.I.A.W. Small College Championships at the UNR Lombardi Aquatic Complex on March 7-10.

PROGRESS?

The Decline of Reno

by Paul Strickland

Reno once had a sense of pride as a distinctively Northern city — one of beauty, unity, solidity, and tradition. It wanted to set itself apart from the zany, hastily improvised, and seemingly counterfeit cities of the Southern desert, cities which looked like circuses or caravans that never moved on. The architecture of Reno's buildings and houses bespoke a certain permanence and seriousness so necessary to a sense of community pride and identity. In fact, Reno as a singularly beautiful small city was the inspiration for Walter Van Tilburg Clark's The City of Trembling Leaves. In that novel, Clark could see Reno as a center for a possible artistic renaissance, one that might eventually compare favorably with Paris.

Reno's geographical location contributed to its unique beauty. Centered in one of the largest valleys that cover the transition zone between the Sierra Alpine region and the interior desert, it offered almost infinite variety for sightseer and resident alike. Unspoiled lakes and verdant valleys of ranches and pastures were its immediate surroundings, which made it doubly attractive, almost ideal.

In sum, it was once a place where the value of the local scenery outweighed or at least was equal to the economic value of gambling institutions and an artificial, commercialized tourism. Here it seemed that tangible and intangible values were in balance.

However, overpowering greed, which was always latent in Reno's midst, grew suddenly into a malignant cancer that became more deadly as the city approached the present decadent age. Greed combined itself with a policy of desperate attempts to provide any kind of work to any sort of person under any kind of terms, even at the cost of the destruction of the scenic values and the liveability of the area, which presumably had been its chief drawing card in the first place. The idea of work at any price hampered efforts to address environmental issues and to arrest the decline of quality of life. At the same time it bedeviled students who were trying to finish their education aimed toward a practical goal as quickly as possible, and who in the course of their studies were finding that life was becoming somehow very dull and even painful.

Las Vegas — false, ugly Las Vegas — was coming to Reno, whether Reno liked it or not. As one student put it in a letter to Sagebrush, the area was fast becoming unhealthy for plants, children, and other living things. Students were annoyed by air pollution, and they were imperiled by serious crime which reached even into the university campus. The campus itself was losing some of its traditional charm as time-honored, ivy-covered buildings around the quad were scheduled for demolition. Students wondered whether it might soon become just another sterile, overly bureaucratic multiversity.

What was happening to Reno proved that Man was out of touch with himself and his surroundings — his environment. Man deeply needs to see a reflection of his own vitality in the vitality of Nature and wildlife. From time to time he needs to leave his civilization in order to reflect on it and on his place in it as well as to consider his place in Nature. He should be able to leave a city quickly and reach the margins of the countryside without an undue expenditure of time. But the most important people in the community did not recognize this fact. Increasingly Reno residents came to fear the eventual horror of a city so extensive that it is impossible to walk out of it one day.

In the meantime, deer herds in the mountains were retreating and thinning out. The Truckee River grew to be less than pleasant, even resembling a sewer canal as it left the Truckee Meadows. Los Angeles-style smog shrouded the valley more and more frequently. Picturesque ranches, pasturelands, and simple open spaces began to disappear one by one like the last of a student's aged relatives.

Reno's situation, then, would seem to be rather hopeless, although students can still do a great deal to ameliorate ugliness or other intolerable conditions in specific neighborhoods. And if the city itself is doomed, much can still be done to save some outlying areas from encroaching urban sprawl. Finally, students who have come here from other cities can, when they return home, work to prevent the same cancerous growth from occurring in their areas. If students become involved in civic affairs and take action where necessary, the still liveable portions of the American West can be preserved for future generations.

MAME

Mame is the story of a well-to-do New York woman who somehow manages to see that everything has a happy ending.

The story unfolds at the height of the 1920s when Mame acquires a 10-year-old orphan nephew, Patrick, and is forced to change her lifestyle.

During the Depression, Mame loses all of her money and has difficulty keeping jobs. But, she miraculously meets and marries a wealthy Southerner. When Mame's husband dies suddenly in the 1930s, she returns to her old apartment. Patrick is now in college and wants to marry a "dumb blonde." Mame rescues Patrick and continues to do so as she foils the Establishment and defies all generation gaps.

Artemisia

Standing: Bill Webb and Sherri Humphreys (Editor). Sitting (l to r): Virginia Folchi and Maxine Blackburn.

I'm sitting up here in my office in the old Mechanical Arts Building on this 11th day of February — thinking.
 ...thinking about last April when I naively filed for this job, and how surprised I was to learn that out of approximately 6,000 undergrads I was the only one interested — me, with virtually no skills, no journalistic or art background — just a lot of energy, optimism and ideas (attributes which dissipated a bit as the year wore on).
 ...thinking about the pressures and responsibilities, and all the mistakes I made as I was learning what it took to put out a yearbook.
 ...thinking about the limited budget I had to work with, and the frustration of being able to put only one color picture per page due to the additional cost of $55 per extra color transparency.
 ...thinking about all the great people who work here in publications, the way we all get along so fine, and the good times we have had this year.

...thinking about how this great old building won't even be here next year. It's strange the way our society seems to have no respect or concern for that which is old and timeworn — showing marked preference for that which is fresh and new.

...thinking about how the last part of this book is supposed to be sent out by tomorrow in order to meet that important final deadline, and how the typesetting machine is broken and won't even be fixed until tomorrow. Oh well. Everything will work out somehow. The book will be finished and I'll have my Saturday and Sunday afternoons free again.

Now, most important, I would like to express my gratitude to everyone who helped in any way with the production of this book. And, to those who worked closest with me, without whom this book would not have been, Thank You. Thank you for your time, your energy, your ideas, your respective expertise, your patience and your faith.

Sherri Humphreys.

Edward Richard Larson

(1920-1979)

Dr. E.R. Larson, a UNR geological professor, collapsed in his office at the Mackay School of Mines on February 1, 1979.

Larson, a native of New York City, joined the UNR faculty in September 1949 as an assistant professor of geology. He became a full professor in 1959.

During his career, Larson conducted extensive research, including field research in the French Alps and Himalayas.

Samuel Goudsmit

(1902-1978)

Dr. Sam Goudsmit, renowned physicist and co-discoverer of electron spin, collapsed near his car in a UNR parking lot on December 4, 1978.

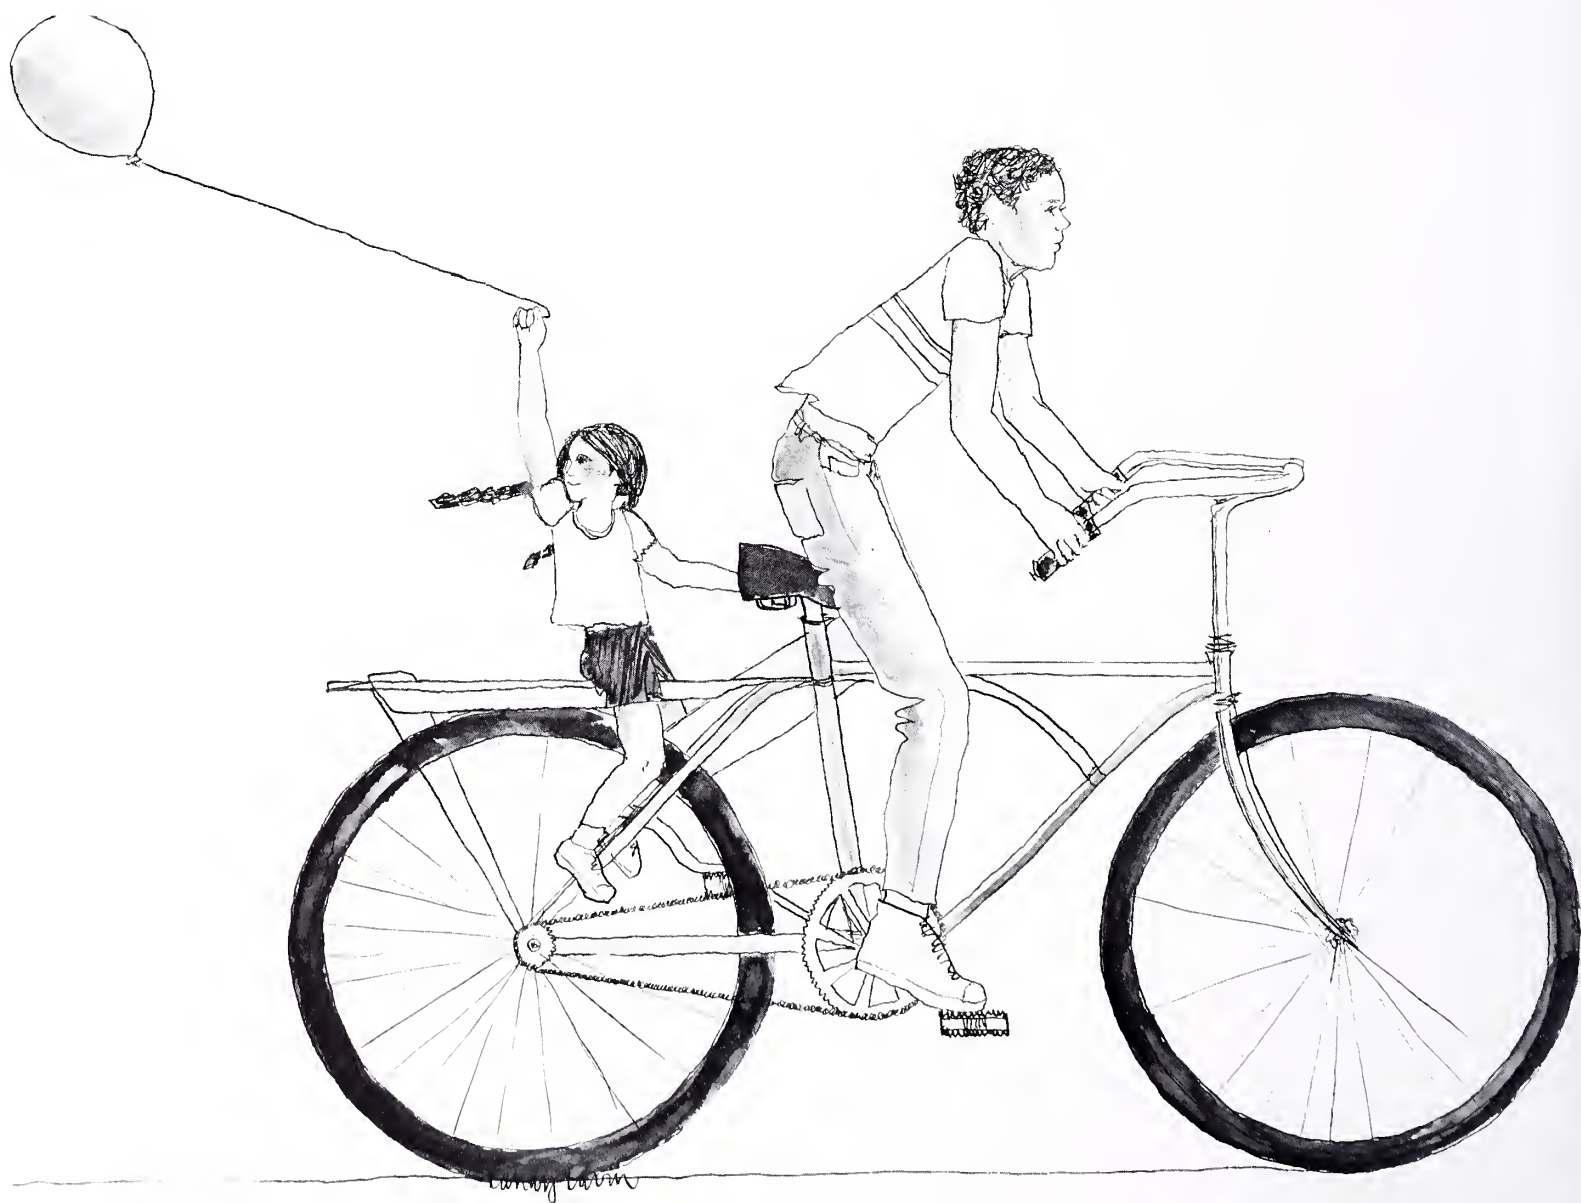

Goudsmit taught an elementary physics course for university students who never studied the subject in high school. He also worked with a graduate student.

Last year, Goudsmit was honored by the government of Holland on the 50th anniversary of his doctorate degree with the Netherlands' award of Commander in the Order of Orange Nassau. His most important national assignment came during World War II when the U.S. War Department named him chief of scientific intelligence.

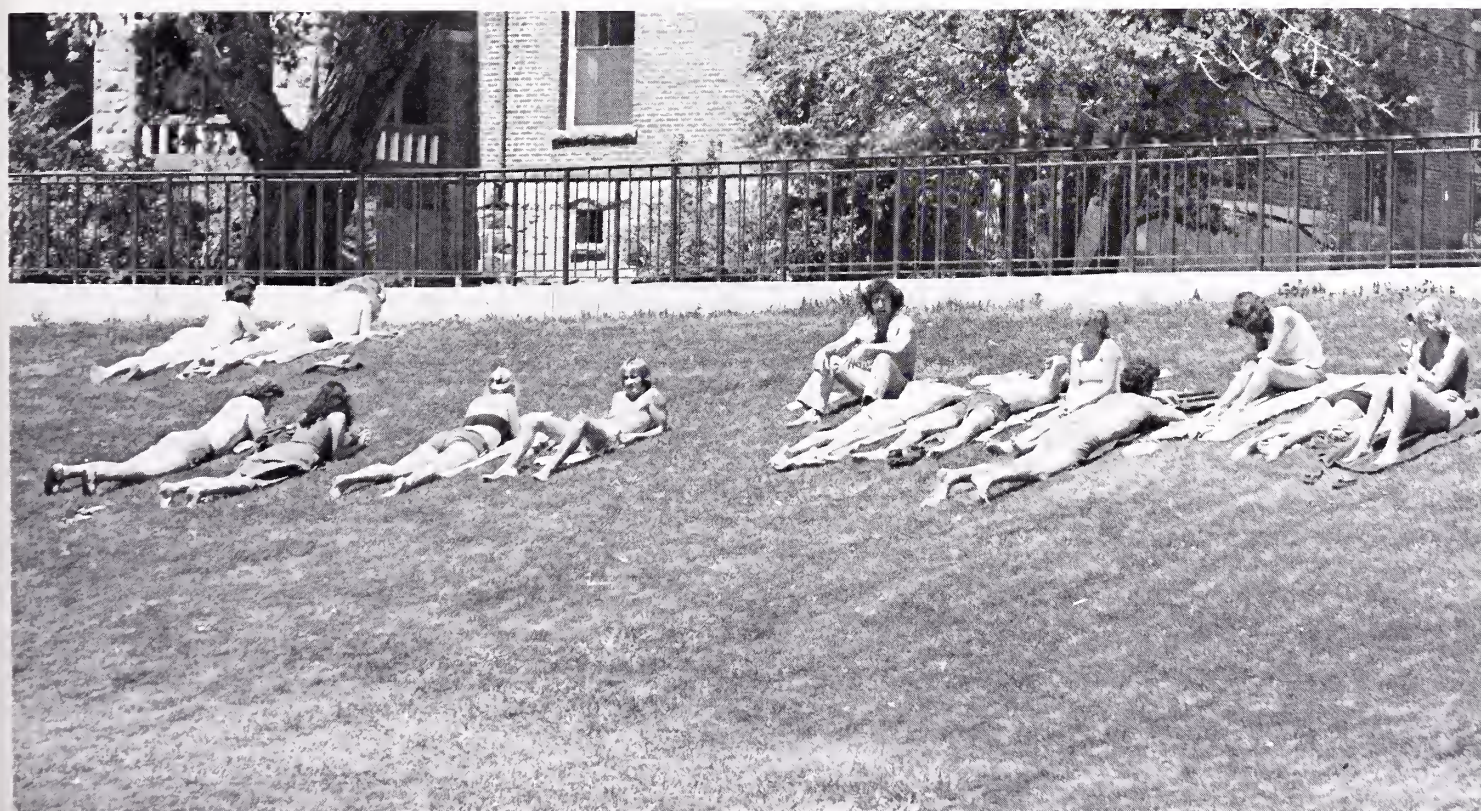

In November 1977, Goudsmit won the National Medal of Science, the nation's highest award for outstanding achievement in science and engineering. Other distinguished awards include: the U.S. Medal of Freedom, the German Physics Society's Karl Compton Award for Distinguished Statesmanship, and the Order of the British Empire.

GRADUATION

How splendid is the rose, delicate and beautiful

it commemorates life .

What was I put here to do?
My life is short —
I can live and die
    and not do a thing.
But life would be useless then.
I could do great things!
But for who — me or others?
And if I do,
will they be remembered
    or forgotten
    in the ages of time?

Dave S. Hoffman
